Editorial:

Namaste All,

Towards the end of June we were entertained by a vast assortment of artist and it was great to see that traditional and classical styles of performing still remain a key element in Indian society. Music, in its many ways, is a simple platform on which values and traditions can be passed through generations. The attendance of the audience was a true insight into the values held by the Indian community throughout Brisbane. On a personal level it was great to see such a turnout and would like to thank all those who attended and the artist as well.

Teachings of Vedas

Some important points to consider when we talk about progress. Here is some them.

A patient, inquisitive individual who leads a life of truthfulness is the one who can progress further on the path of Yog.

For spiritual progress, one has to minutely scan one's beliefs and opinions and has to dissect and filter them with the help of logic and evidence. Only then will the wrong beliefs be attenuated and the right ones be strengthened.

An individual becomes worthy once the mind has progressed from the concrete to the abstract or from the extensive to the intensive; when the person has upgraded from indifferent behaviour – the “who cares” attitude – to supreme conduct and when one has made appropriate progress in knowledge, action and prayer.

Those who always focus on their end – death, the last moment of this valuable life – are able to think faster, work faster. Consequently, they are able to progress faster towards their destined goal.

Keeping oneself engaged in tasks of excellence, concentrating on a pre-decided goal and making constant effort to achieve it are some measures to keep the mind free of immoral or inappropriate thoughts of passion etc.

We keep rising and falling all day long. False knowledge, wrong actions, incorrect forms of devotion and prayer – these are the things that lead to downfall; true knowledge, right types of efforts and devotion in the right direction are factors that raise a person to great heights. A spiritual traveler always remembers this fact, remains cautious and keeps improving himself. On continuing this practice for a long time, it gets firmer and stronger.

To be successful in life, one needs to observe extreme caution. Questions like – What should I see, What shouldn't I see, What should I hear, What shouldn't I hear, What should I know, What I shouldn't know, What should I do, What shouldn't I do – are of paramount importance.

Strange incidents keep occurring from time to time but the practitioner of Yog always keeps an eye on what effect those incidents are exerting on him and whether they are snubbing his target of salvation or augmenting it. In case a bad effect does manage to creep in, he successfully and quickly wards it off.

Until the point of attaining the highest spiritual level, it is vital to remain under the supervision of elders and to abide by the instructions of teachers. Only then is progress possible, otherwise downfall is certain.
